Second International Conference on Humanities 2017 (INCoH2017)

"The Role(s) and Relevance of Humanities for Sustainable Development"

Date:
16 – 17 August 2017

Venue:
Parkroyal Penang Resort Penang, MALAYSIA

The multifaceted areas of studies in the Humanities, such as Literature, Language and Linguistics, Translation and Interpreting, Philosophy, Civilisation and Religious Studies, History and Geography, exude not only vigour but also intensity in many intrinsic and imperative functions irrespective of people and nations. Such dynamics thus confirm the roles and relevance of Humanities studies in contributing towards concerted efforts and pursuits for the betterment of humankind.

The United Nations declaration of Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 2030 identifies actions in seventeen areas for humanity and the planet. The requisites are indicative of the means of implementing and revitalising global partnerships for sustainable development across intranational and/or international borders and senses.

In particular, INCoH2017 aims to:

- share current findings and practices in the Humanities that address issues related to sustainable development

- establish collaborative network in the different disciplines of Humanities (namely Literature, Language and Linguistics, Translation and Interpretation, Philosophy, Civilisation and Religious Studies, History and Geography)
